President's Address

Congratulations, Class of 2001

To fastidious year watchers, this is the official first year of the third millennium—not the year 2000. But for [illegible] your life's journey, the year 2001 will mark a special moment of accomplishment.

As you move into the next stage of your life, I leave you with this challenge.

The Apostle Paul reminds us that as citizens of Christ's kingdom we live in tension with our surrounding culture. You will experience this as you move on in education, work and personal relationships. You will walk a path knowing you are called to live in the world both as citizen and alien. There is no way to avoid living in tension. You will rise in the morning, driven by the demands and assumptions of our world, yet will sing, "This is my Father's world."

What is alien to Jesus' kingdom is what the New Testament calls worldliness—the pervasive dissonance of this age with God's world. Paul tells us by the concerns of this age we are inclined to live in opposition to God and his creation. This generates a worldliness which disjoins God from nature and us from him. Worldliness, not the world, is what Christ's followers are alien to. Worldliness doesn't mean being a political leader, a scholar creating wealth or flying an airplane. These vocations only become worldly when used for ourselves—when our scholarship is to prove others wrong so that our name becomes revered, when our ability to grow ideas into companies that generate wealth is done so personal wealth becomes the goal, when leading a nation or city becomes the aphrodisiac of personal power—that's what is "worldly" and not of God's good world.

To bring the two worlds into balance—to be able to live as citizens and aliens—is a gift of grace. The promise of heaven provides ballast for the journey. Heaven is not just "out there" or "in that place." It is part of the journey from the womb to the never-ending years of the afterlife. Intrinsic to our journey is an inbred restless spirit. Some call it dissatisfaction. We are driven to improve what is, to begin what isn't, to grow a seed, to write on a blank sheet of paper, to climb a mountain just because it's there, to teach the young, to wrest from the jungles a root to cure a disease. Such restlessness is not a sign of worldly motivation but a signal that we are bred from the beginnings of creation to push back the curtains of knowledge. In that we are citizens.

Aliens are paradoxically citizens of both worlds, the paradise of God's "good" creation—the earth—and the kingdom of heaven, which Jesus inaugurated and articulated. The two are not at odds, unless the earth becomes worldly. We are alien in that we are called to distance ourselves from that which robs us of the higher calling as followers of Jesus. Peter said as much: "I urge you, as aliens and strangers in the world, to abstain from sinful desires which war against your soul." That is not to say one doesn't live in the world, as he makes clear: "Live such good lives among the pagans that, though they accuse you of doing wrong, they may see your good deeds and glorify God on the days he visits us" (1 Peter 2:11, 12). The writer to the Hebrews, in listing the remarkable lives of heroic figures, calls them "aliens and strangers on earth" (Heb. 11:13), not because they had no linkage to their world but rather they were so far out in front of their peers and culture that in a sense they were strangers and even aliens, as if from a far off country.

As we move forward, preparing for and expecting the great offering of everlasting life, there are times, places and circumstances in which we will be aliens, living with a different code of ethics, seeing through different eyes. When the disciples were annoyed about people outside of their group casting out demons in Jesus' name, they were nonplused by Jesus' response: "Anyone who gives you a cup of water in my name because you belong to Christ will certainly not lose his reward" (Mark 9:41). This acting within the guidelines of his new order anticipates the new order of heaven. Malcolm Muggeridge puts it this way: "The only ultimate disaster that can befall us, I have come to realize, is to feel ourselves to be at home here on earth. As long as we are aliens, we cannot forget our true homeland."

The danger of feeling comfortable as a citizen of one's culture, which has been infected by the disease of rebellion and self-interest, is that we can be overtaken by its values, mores, attitudes and criteria of goodness. The antithesis of being alien is to live in tension to such vulnerability. The longing for the goodness of heaven leads us up and out of the self-driven interests of much of which surrounds us.

To long for the good and best doesn't remove us from doing good in the world. Jesus, in his prayer for his disciples, made this most clear. Jesus says to his father, "I have given them your word and the world has hated them, for they are not of the world any more than I am of the world. My prayer is not that you take them out of the world but that you protect them from the evil one" (John 17:14, 15, italics added). It's in this world that we find what we seek.

As a grad of 2001, my prayer for you is that God's Word will be your guide, His Spirit your life and His ways your path. Live at home in God's world and let that be your witness to the whole world.

Great Outdoors

This was actually the best leadership trip ever. Frank and Dave spent most of their time on the greens, while the 'rope over water' shark pit provided hours of fun. Yet what really made this retreat was JEFF BURN. Oh sweet Larry David and Hector. Burnzie tells the best stories. The rednecks with shoes, country raccoon hunting, and who could forget the the skunk in the culvert(two thumbs up from Sweetman). God truly blessed us during those few days. We were able to understand each other much more and to truly come to love each other. Sure we sat in a basement for 4 hours at a time, but that didn't even matter much. Because when that Chris Graham shared...I was riveted.

Moving Day

So it's September 4th and Tyndale is plunged into an increadible tumult of activity as the frosh show up for the first time. They come with their clothes, their teddy bears, and their toothbrushes. Some even bring their entire extended family. But in the end they all arrived, prepared to begin their stay here at Tyndale.

See You At SYATP The Pole

Prayer is an integral part of the Christian walk, both for the individual and for a body of believers. The 'See You At The Pole' movement exists to provide Christians in schools across North America the opportunity to gather together for prayer in full view of the world. It is a chance for young Christians to take a stand for their faith and pray for their families, friends, leaders, and country.

5) You thought that, like in school, obeying 70% of those Commandments would still get you a passing grade.

4) E-mails arrive with attachments; lightening bolts, sandstorms, locust and such.

3) Your list of medical problems includes 'uncontrollable festering boils' and 'turned into a pillar of salt'.

2) No matter how hard they try, the Fire Department can't put out the burning bush in your backyard.

1) Your car is crushed by what authorities can only describe as a 'giant, unidentified finger'.

Halloween Extravaganza

Futbol Craze

The Fall 2000 semester at Tyndale saw the inaugural season of intramural soccer. Thanks to the efforts of Jeff Burn and others the entire season seemed to be a great success. There were six teams, comprised of both students and staff, which played a series of games through October and November. And though there are still some bugs to work out (such as how a team that never won a game ended up winning the championship) the future of indoor soccer at Tyndale looks very promising.

It goes without saying that guys like things like Jakie Chan movies and demolition derbies. To that list can now be added the travelling reptile show. Guys from 4 South and Central were captivated by the miriad of animals which were displayed. Despite the fact that some (eg. KJ, Bunner and Mike) did not posses the courage to even come near some of God's most incredible creatures, it seems safe to say that the night was a huge success.

The Tuesday Christmas chapel for the year 2000 was held outside in the quad and led by the Tyndale Salvation Army band. Though not all braved the cold weather, those who attended the event had the chance to participate in carol singing and heard a narrative of the Christmas story.

For those of you who have not lived in residence the whole reality of it all is rather difficult to understand. For those who have lived in dorm it is something much more difficult to put into words than one would imagine. Whatever ones concept of dorm life the truth is that, among other things, it provides stable community and close friendships while still allowing for endless surprises and fun.
